FROM THE RECTORY

For all Welsh people, March starts with a celebration, St David's Day. Across Wales, schools mark it with Eisteddfodau, competitions of music, dance, poetry, drama and public speaking. Communities mark it with concerts or Noson Llawen, evenings of entertainment including comedy skits, monologues or songs, all of course accompanied by food, Cawl, a cross between lamb stew and soup and Welsh cakes. Churches mark the day of the patron saint with services. March 1st was the day of St David's death, the year is uncertain because of the vagaries of the dating system but the day is certain because we have an account of his death. David, or Dewi Sant as he is properly known, was one of the great saints of the fifth and sixth century Christian renewal movement, inexplicably known by historians from the Hanoverian period on as the Dark Ages but known in Wales as the Age of the Saints. He was brought up in West Wales, began his studies with St Paulinus at Whitland, whose blindness he reputedly healed and finished his education at Whithorn in Galloway, then the best school in Britain, with the all finest minds of his generation. It was there he was tonsured as a monk and returned to West Wales to set up a monastery at what is now St David's, a place that feels remote to us until we remember that seas were the motorways of the fifth and sixth centuries. From there, he set out to renew the Christian faith of Britain after the Saxon invasion. There are churches dedicated to him all over Herefordshire and he undoubtedly visited Somerset, so easily connected to Wales by sea.

Dewi Sant's feast day normally falls in Lent, which is fitting as, even in his own day, he was noted for his austerity. His nickname was "the waterman" because his community drank only water, unusual at a period when clean safe drinking water was hard to find. Dewi and his community, like thousands of others, both hermits and communities of various sizes across the British isles, followed the simple life of prayer, poverty and dedication to Christ begun by St Anthony in the Egyptian desert and brought to Europe by St Martin of Tours. The dedication to St Michael of the hilltop Church at Penselwood makes it possible that it was one of those British places of prayer, "pen" meaning head or top in Welsh, and St Michael being the Saint to which hilltop churches were dedicated.

In our society we can usually have what we want until illness or recession bite but at this season of Lent, let us reflect on the message of St David and his contemporaries, that perhaps there is more to life than this. Jo

Celebrate with King James

2011 marks the 400th anniversary of the publication of the King James Version (KJV) of the Bible and a year of celebration of the Bible in the English language. The translation of the Bible into the everyday English of its generation was a milestone that opened up a whole new world of possibilities. It led to profound changes in thinking that have shaped the culture of the western world and left a lasting legacy right up to the present day. You can find out more about the history of the Bible, discover what life was like in 1611 and read a digitised version of the KJV online at <http://www.kingjamesbibletrust.org/>

Join the Treasure Hunt Does your church contain hidden treasures? Or maybe they are not so hidden but you think more people should have the chance to see them. The Church Treasures Project at the Bishop's Palace in Wells is a volunteer-led initiative to create and sustain exciting exhibitions in order to showcase the many wonderful objects located in churches across the diocese.

But what is a treasure? It might be made using costly, luxurious materials; old, or with a long association with the life of a church community; closely associated with an individual who plays or has played a remarkable part in the life of his or her community; a crafted, unique object, eg a painting, a textile, a memorial brass.

An example of a treasure from the Bishop's Palace is The Marriage Register. It tells the story of the 21 marriages which have taken place over the past 100 years in the Palace Chapel.

The present register witnesses marriages from 1903 when the Revd Herbert Wild from Nottingham was married to Helen Severn. We don't know who she was, but as her address was the Palace and her father was an artist it is possible that she was a domestic servant there. It is often left to the discretion of the Bishop as to whom he will marry in his Chapel. At present only those with some very specific relationship to the household may be married there - the last person being the Bishop's son in 2008.

Collections manager, Felicity Baber, and the team of volunteers are working towards the first exhibition 'Treasure' which will open in April 2012. Felicity said: "It's such an exciting project and we hope that all the churches in the diocese will want to be involved." If your church has a treasure in which you think we would be interested let us know; please contact Felicity Baber on 01749988111 (ext 203) (Monday-Wednesday) or visit the website at treasureexhibition@bishoppalace.org.uk.

DAFFODIL FESTIVAL – BAYFORD CHAPEL SATURDAY 26th MARCH 2011

After a long and cold winter, come and celebrate the arrival of British Summer Time at a Daffodil Festival to be held in Bayford Chapel on Saturday 26th March from 10.00 am to 5.00 pm. It will be lovely to see the building brimming over with the bright spring colour of daffodils. The aim is to involve adults and children, with the former entering their own arrangements and the latter being encouraged to use any container e.g. a jam jar, and lots of imagination! Additionally, for the children there will be an area where they can paint a picture and enter it in a competition. A large jar of sweets awaits the winner! In addition to the flowers and pictures on show, there will be coffee, tea, hot cross buns etc. served throughout the day. There will be a small entrance fee and the proceeds will go towards the costs of refurbishing the rear windows and other parts of the hall.

If you or members of your family would like to enter an arrangement or offer to help in the organisation of the day, please contact Maggie Giles on 01963 33147 or Diana Noble on 01963 31071 (diana.noble@btinternet.com). NBN
