I'm going to stop saying it's a packed issue as it always is, but look out this month for updates on how all the Parishes are getting on with their Jubilee planning, a lovely story towards the back from the Rev'd Rosy and another update from Udder Farm.

If it wasn't for so many volunteers then most of the things advertised in here wouldn't happen and we take many of them for granted. Lots of neighbours are a lifeline, particularly in rural life, but some just go that extra mile. There is information in here about how to nominate our unsung heroes in BBC Somerset's, Make A Difference Awards, but the deadline is April 29th, so don't delay having a look.

Anyway, I have bunting to make and invitations to design for the Jubilee celebrations so I will stop scribbling now!

Deadline for June issue May the 18th, copy to tristerncottage@hotmail.com

Helen

It's not often that we get asked to do actual 'reporting' in the Village News but a few residents from Cucklington have asked me to highlight an issue that is having a huge effect on both their lives and their livelihoods. (I have resisted a corny headline and am trying to remind myself that this is not the Sun or the Telegraph!)

Farmers and smallholders in Cucklington are having ongoing issues with out of control dogs. Bins are being raided in the night and livestock are being chased.

Chasing by dogs can cause serious damage to sheep, even if the dog doesn't catch them. The stress of worrying by dogs can cause sheep to die and pregnant ewes to miscarry their lambs. Sheep fleeing from dogs are often killed or seriously injured by their panicked attempts to escape, damaging fences and field boundaries in the process. Dog bites can cause death in sheep, require them to be put down at a later date or result in expensive veterinary bills.

Sheep worrying is a criminal offence and owners who allow their dog to carry out this activity could face a large fine or imprisonment and farmers have the power in some circumstances to shoot the dog.

If you see any incidences of sheep worrying or stray out of control dogs please contact the farmer if appropriate, the dog warden (01823 215013 ) or even the police on 101 Together we can stop this, keep your dog under control and report what you see!

ROGATING IN CUCKLINGTON!

Come and revive the ancient tradition and 'rogate' around Cucklington Village on Rogation Sunday - May 22nd!

"Rogating", or walking around parish boundaries to "beat the bounds", was done by villagers to pray for protection and blessing on crops in the forthcoming year.

We'll meet at St Lawrence Cucklington at 11.00am and finish at Arthur Morison Memorial Hall at 12.30pm for a well earned ploughman's lunch.

All welcome including dogs and walking will be on roads!

- Fundraiser
- Carer
- Great Neighbour
- Key Worker
- Environment
- Together award

Nominations are now open and will close on the

The winners will be announced at our Make a Difference awards ceremony at the home of Somerset Cricket at the County Ground on the evening of Friday 16th September.

VILLAGES' WALKING GROUP

Tony and Janet Cole kindly led our March walk. They took us to Pen Selwood, where there are so many footpaths and woodland tracks, so were able to lead a walk which was different from the one we walked a month earlier.

If you receive your Newsletter early then it may provide a helpful reminder that our April walk was planned for late in the month, Friday 29th April, so we can walk in Duncliffe Hill woods and see – and smell - the bluebells.

We're still hoping to have a walk in the Cucklington area in May, but date and details are yet to be finalized, so do get in touch if you would like to join us for that walk, and if you would like more information about our visit to Duncliffe Hill – contact details below. We'd love it if you would like to join us. Do come!

UDDER FARM NEWS

Hello its me again 501, there has been a lot going on since I wrote last month.

Us having breakfast!

Well for starters our mothers and older sisters have been going out day and night for some time now, due to the weather getting a bit warmer and are enjoying the sun on their backs, mind you they were complaining a bit, when we were still in our shed and the temperature had dropped over night, as there was a frost and the grass was crunching under their feet. But the bonus is that they had nice fresh grass to eat.

Before we went out we had to be freeze branded with our numbers, mine is going to be 501 when it appears. The nice man that does it comes along with his van with a tank of dry ice in it and puts the branding irons in this, when they are really cold, colder than a frost, he shaves a patch of hair off of our bums and then pushes the branding irons onto our skin. It's a bit cold at first but then it just becomes numb, slowly over the next few weeks the frozen skin, a sort of scab, flakes off and when the hair underneath grows back it comes back white so that the number can be seen against our black coats. Our older sisters went out a few days before us and they all had to have fly tags put in their ears. This is to keep the pesky flies and other insects from bothering them during the summer months. When it was our turn to go out we had to have fly tags put into our ears as well, also they gave us a bolus that should mean that we will not suffer from any worms as the bolus keeps working all summer to make sure we stay healthy. Then when this had been done we were loaded into a trailer and taken to a field in the village, they couldn't turn us down the lane like our older sisters as we tend to go mad when our lockdown is over. When we were turned out we were split up into two groups, the replacement dairy breeds were taken to one field and the young beef animals were taken to another field, this is because it is easier to manage smaller groups and for them to count us when they come to check we are alright every day, they even bring us some concentrate (cake) to eat, this is to make sure we grow, also they have realised that if they feed us with concentrate each day, if they want to move us from one field to another, because we are greedy, they walk in front of us with a bag of cake and we follow because we now know that we will get the cake when we get to the next field, who doesn't like cake.

Regards 501

The Skinny Boy

Join me for a minute on the school playing field one lunch break. You're walking back towards the main school building after an errand and, turning a corner, straight ahead of you is the class bully, Wayne, who you've upset by making a joke about him to your friends and he knows. He's twice your size and, worse still, he's got his mates with him all laughing as you get closer.

You quickly turn round, not wanting to meet them on your own! But Wayne comes running up, sticking his bad breath face in yours. He gobs onto your cheek, poking your chest and sneering insults about you and your friends. You want to kill him, you feel so angry but you're all alone so you have to get away.

But he won't let you pass. He calls his mates over to "re-arrange yer face" and your stomach drops in fear. Helpless, your eye catches someone running over ... but oh no, it's the class wimp, small and skinny, nerdy and weird. What's he doing - he's the last person who can help you! You hate him, teasing him in class whenever you can.

Wayne clocks the skinny boy too and turns - seizing your moment, out goes your leg and Wayne topples, falling hard. And you're off - running for your life! No looking back, just on and on to safety as the end of break bell rings out your escape. Drenched in sweat and relief, you slump into your desk, high on adrenaline.

The skinny boy gets back 10 minutes late and gets a detention. He's shaking and limping with his hand over his ear. What happened to him? The Headmaster appears in the doorway, looking angry. He glares over at you - you're to go directly to his office! You've started a fight with Wayne and broken his leg!

Outrageous! You protest but the Head bellows "silence!". As you rise, the skinny boy gets up too. What's he doing? Is he going to tell on you about leaving him to the bullies - get his own back for all your teasing?

The Head tells the skinny boy to sit down but he follows anyway to the Head's study. And then, before the Head can speak, he quietly states what had happened, ignoring the murderous looks of Wayne and his mates. He doesn't seem scared - just concerned that you're not blamed for something you haven't done. He doesn't mention stepping in to help you but praises you for not reacting to Wayne when you could have.

The Head calms down very quickly and soon you are both allowed to go. As you walk back to the classroom, all you can think to say to the small skinny boy is "thanks!". He just nods and smiles and shrugs as if it were nothing.

But, from that day on, you're changed.

You just can't get over it - how he helped you when you didn't deserve it - after all your mocking and rejection. He took blows meant for you. He praised you rather than pointing out your mistakes. You see in him a different way to live - a better way of generosity and kindness, courage and fairness. And you want to know more - how can he be like that? You begin to seek him out, to hear his different viewpoint, to learn from him. You become a disciple of One whom the world sees as weak and powerless, just as you did, but who you see has more power and goodness in his little finger than you've shown your whole life.

No-one has treated you the way He did - protecting you when you least deserved it, on your side, celebrating your strength, forgiving your failure. You've never felt acceptance, respect and value like this.

But best of all, despite all that He's seen of you, despite His greatness, His goodness and His power, the only thing He wants from you is friendship. No apology or service to pay him back - just friendship, you and him.

And as you slowly believe He really does mean friend, so you slowly begin to become more and more like Him.

"He was despised and rejected by men ... and we held him in low esteem. But he took up our pain and bore our suffering ... he was pierced for our transgressions and crushed for our iniquities; the punishment that brought us peace was on him and by his wounds we are healed". Isaiah 53:3
